JUNE 2025

Hello Everyone, I can't believe it has been 1 month since I stepped foot into Japan. I do want to thank those who have given but also prayed as I have gone through this process, all has been a huge blessing.

Here in Fukuoka on Sunday's they have both an English service and Japanese service which I have been able to attend both. God has been moving in a mighty way both in person and through zoom for those who can't attend in person.

On Monday mornings I have had the privilege of being able to go to Japanese language class. In this class I have been learning both the language and a little bit of the culture. They divide you into the different levels of knowledge in the language, since I am just starting out I went into the beginner group they have. Although I have so far learned a couple greetings, I have enjoyed going every Monday to learn new words.

On Wednesday's here they have an international club where people that come from all around the world can meet and hang out. While meeting we work on putting together various games that we come up with ourselves. When putting together the games we get split into different groups to work on the different portions of what would turn into a full game you can play. I have enjoyed getting to meet new people from all over while creating games to play.

On Thursday's I have been able to be apart of an English language club that has been taught by Sister Clevenger. In this club the locals are able to learn English but also hangout because it is a very laid back setting. Every week it is in a new location which I have enjoyed because I get to see and try different places that are here. I am praying that one day the club is able to meet at a more perminante spot so that there can be more exposure to the English language.

On Friday's the Chase's have game night hosted at their home. I look forward to this every week because I get to try different variety of foods made by the Chase's but also get to meet more people. We have dinner and then we get to enjoy time with friends playing games. It's always a great time and every week it seems like more people are able to join which is a huge blessing.
