

AIM in Brazil

SUNDAY SCHOOL

I was asked to teach Sunday School on the last Sunday in July. I taught in English while my friend translated into Portuguese so the kids could understand. It was nice being in a Sunday School classroom again. We talked about Jesus calming the storm. After the lesson, they practiced a song for Father's Day that they are going to sing in front of the church in a couple of weeks.

ENGLISH CLASS

There are three of us AIMers, and we were asked to begin teaching English classes this month until we leave. I will start teaching with my roommate next month, but I had the opportunity to sit in on one of the classes and assist the other AIMer as she taught. It was a joy to see the members of the class enjoying learning English.

BABYSITTING

I spent the week at the Andersons' home watching the children with a friend. We helped get them ready and took them to church. We also had the opportunity to take them to the mall, where they were able to run around and burn off some energy. It was such a fun week!

OHIO GROUP

A youth group from Ohio visited for a week. I had the opportunity to meet them and attend one of their Bible studies. During the day, I joined them in sightseeing. They also spent time evangelizing around the metro stations throughout the city. On Sunday, they ministered to the church through song, and the service was especially powerful.

I have now been here for two months, though it truly does not feel that long. I have stayed very busy, and the time has passed quickly. I recently began teaching Sunday School and will be on rotation as needed. I have also been asked to join the music team and to teach a women's Bible study in the coming months. In addition, I will be starting to teach English classes in the near future.

I have been able to attend home groups twice a week in different homes. Recently, one of the ladies who attends the church received a refilling of the Holy Ghost, and it was a blessing to witness. I have spent much of my time with the missionaries' children, and I could not think of a better way to invest my time—they are such a joy to be around.

Please continue to pray for Brazil, the IPUB church, and the Andersons.
